Compound Words: How many compound words can you make with these pictures.

As we look to downsize or declutter, we should also get our "affairs" in order. This is a difficult topic, but if you have lost a loved one, you know how important it is for those left behind.

The information below is not legal guidance, but might be a way to start the conversation with loved ones, financial institutions and medical staff. Many documents needed for End of Life do not require an attorney, forms can be found online, and many only need a notary or witness. If you are ever unsure, legal guidance is the best option.

General tips...

- Consider a beneficiary on bank accounts. The beneficiary only needs a death certificate and ID at the bank. Payable Upon Death is similar.
- A Transfer on Death deed for your home can be completed and filed with the county. The home ownership transfers to your designee.
- Living Will: Put in writing exactly what you want done in the event you cannot speak for yourself on healthcare decisions. A Medical Power of Attorney works similarly.
- Durable Power of Attorney: Allows one to designate a person to make legal decisions if one is no longer competent to do so.
- Last Will and Testament: Designates to whom personal belongings will go too.
- Funeral Planning Declaration: allows one to express wishes for all funeral arrangements.
- Keep all documents in one safe place and make sure your heirs know where they are.
 - Birth Certificate, Social Security card, passport
 - List of all banks and account numbers
 - All investment institutions with account numbers
 - Lists of credit cards, utility accounts, etc.
 - Instructions on how and when things are paid.
 - Phone, tablet, laptop logins, IDs, account logins and passwords
 - Titles for all vehicles, campers, boats...
